Our extensive portfolio in primary and secondary school design places us among the top 100 design firms in the country for this specialized practice.

From new schools and learning centers to complex renovations and expansions, we help create a cost effective design that inspires innovation in students and helps teachers prepare kids for college and the workforce. Our projects require flexibility to accommodate a variety of programs and curricula, evolving technology, and community use.
“In my ten-year relationship with the firm, they have always been service-oriented, willing to attend community, committee, and board meetings to convey the needs of the students as it related to buildings.

They have represented the children in their efforts to keep costs down but quality up.”
