

Resiliency Readiness Planning

Owners and operators of criminal justice facilities bear the responsibility of restoring and maintaining public safety during and after a disaster. The impacts of disasters often affect stakeholders' ability to deliver these critical public safety services. The best defense against these impacts is pre-disaster planning. Our criminal justice planners and emergency management and disaster mitigation experts offer resiliency readiness planning services to assist clients with assessing current plans, developing a concept of operations to mitigate the effects of a disaster, conducting emergency response operations, restoring public safety, and efficiently recovering from the incident. This planning process is an interactive, collaborative effort that brings together criminal justice, emergency management, and community stakeholders.

The result is a consensus-built plan that guides the criminal justice system to restore public safety.

“Hurricane Katrina immediately changed how New Orleans would deliver public safety services to the citizens of Orleans Parish. Confronted with Katrina’s devastation, I needed to react to the immediate and the long-term rebuilding needs.

Dewberry’s assistance in planning for these post-hurricane needs was critical to achieving a strategic and sustainable recovery.

Their recommendations gave us a clarity of vision to rebuild Orleans Parish’s public safety program, recommendations that are proactive and resilient to future disasters.”

Sheriff Marlin Gusman
Orleans Parish, Louisiana

Lessons Learned: Impacts of Disasters on Public Safety

- Public safety facilities compromised or destroyed resulting in a need to repurpose remaining facilities for public safety use
- Government workforce impacted (e.g. no homes to return to)
- Damage to or loss of legal records and evidence
- Criminal activity surges
- Need for inter-jurisdiction government service agreements
- Public safety facility ownership conflicts
- New areas of litigation appear
- Need for state and federal disaster response and recovery assistance expertise
